

Peter Gibson-Smith

lives and works in Auckland

Bachelor of Fine Arts, Elam
School of Fine Arts, 1983

Peter Gibson-Smith has a substantial and highly acclaimed exhibitions history. He has been championed by the James Wallace Arts Trust as ‘the greatest new talent to hit the art scene since Ingrid Banwell.’ Gibson-Smith is a highly sophisticated arts practitioner. He re-contextualised ancient art practices such as the ancient medium of egg tempera which he combines with contemporary methodologies to create hybrid works of art which are at the same classic avant-garde.
